

AMÉLIE

I had the opportunity to present the preliminary results of my analyses on the effect of singing practice on vocal function during aging in a poster presentation at the CERVO Scientific Day. This was my first experience with this type of scientific presentation, and I truly enjoyed sharing the early findings of my project. This opportunity allowed me to develop and apply my communication and science outreach skills by sharing my project with a diverse audience. The discussions with students and researchers from various scientific backgrounds were particularly enriching and provided me with direct feedback on my work, while also giving me the chance to discover the exciting projects being carried out at the CERVO research center. I'm very much looking forward to presenting the next stages of my project at the next edition of the CERVO Scientific Day and to continuing to engage with the scientific community."
